

Course Description

This course introduces students to the contemporary world through an exploration of globalization and its multiple dimensions—socioeconomic, political, and cultural. It examines how global transformations influence everyday life and shape the moral and social responsibilities of individuals, communities, and nations. Through transdisciplinary perspectives, students analyze global issues, population dynamics, and sustainability challenges that define the present era. The course seeks to develop globally aware and ethically responsible citizens who can relate local realities to global contexts. Peace Studies is integrated in exploring future and sustainability issues, guiding students to understand the role of peace and global citizenship in building a just and sustainable world.

Introduction to Globalization

Defining Globalization

According to Al-Rodhan (2006), Globalization is not a single concept that can be defined and encompassed within a set time frame, nor is it a process that can be defined clearly with a beginning and an end. It is because Globalization involves economic and political integration; global policies; knowledge transmission, cultural stability; the reproduction, relations, and discourses of power; it is a universal process, a concept, a revolution, and “an establishment of the worldwide market free from sociopolitical control. The study says that some people believe that Globalization brought progress, development, and stability. According to Larsson (2001), Globalization is the process of world shrinkage, distances getting shorter, and things moving closer. It pertains to the increasing ease with which somebody on one side of the world can interact, to mutual benefit, with somebody on the other side of the world. However, others believe that Globalization brought regression, colonialism, and destabilization. These beliefs are actually supported by Martin Khor, the President of the third world network in Malaysia, who stated that Globalization is a form of colonization. Hence, Globalization can be defined as narrow and exclusive, or broad and inclusive.

Globalization as Broad and Inclusive

According to Ohmae (1992), Globalization means the onset of the borderless world. This definition proposes that barriers are no longer considered a hindrance because there are so many ways by which we can access information and goods from other countries as if we are living in one place without any borders. From the viewpoint of Ray Kiely and Phil Marfleet (1998), Globalization is a situation wherein societies, cultures, politics, and economics have, in some sense, come closer together. This claim supports the idea of Ohmae by which, as we live in this world, we experience oneness in terms of culture, policies, and technology. Besides, Jan Aart Scholte (1999) states that “Globalization refers to processes whereby social relations acquire relatively distance less and borderless qualities so that human lives are increasingly played out in the world as a single place.” Likewise, Globalization can be viewed as the compression of time and space (Harvey, 1998). These definitions are inclined with the view of Globalization as broad and inclusive. It can be seen that there are common themes from these definitions, such as the elimination of borders among different countries and that the definition is somehow vague and does not clearly define the implication of Globalization in a particular area.

Globalization as Narrow and Exclusive

According to Robert Cox (1999), Globalization is characterized by the internationalizing of production, the new international division of labor, migration from south and north, and a competitive environment, which increases processes such as manufacturing of goods and commodities. This definition presents us an idea that specific activities are happening under Globalization such as the acquisition of products of a particular country to other parts of the world, the categorization of states when it comes to the division of labor as presented in the world system theory, the migration of people to other wealthy nations, and the existence of a free market that allows competition in an open economy. From the viewpoint of Bairoch & Kozul-Wright (1996), Globalization is a process in which the production and financial structures of countries are becoming interlinked by an increasing number of cross-border transactions to create an international division of labor in which national wealth creation comes, increasingly, to depend on economic agents in other countries. In this sense, countries from different parts of the world are actively engaging in transactions with others about the products, labor, investment, and policies that are beneficial to each state. On the other hand, Langhorne (2001) explains that Globalization is the latest stage in a long accumulation of technological advance, which has given human beings the ability to conduct their affairs across the world without reference to nationality, government authority, time of day or physical environment. All of these definitions provide a specific description of Globalization by which it tackles particular areas of human activity. However, this kind of meaning can be limiting in terms of application. Thus, defining Globalization through exclusive and narrow can only be applied with a particular scope of activity.

According to global studies scholar Manfred Steger, globalization is not a singular process but a multidimensional phenomenon. He outlines three principal dimensions of globalization: Economic, Political and Cultural

1. Economic Dimension- This area involves the intensification and stretching of economic interconnections across the globe. It highlights the creation of a global economic order driven by international trade, global financial markets, the operations of transnational corporations, and the influence of institutions like the World Trade Organization.
2. Political Dimension- This dimension encompasses the intensification and expansion of political interrelations worldwide. It covers the evolution of the modern nation-state system, the growth of global governance, the rise of intergovernmental organizations (e.g., the United Nations), and international agreements that affect national sovereignty.
3. Cultural Dimension- Cultural globalization refers to the worldwide expansion and intensification of cultural flows. It deals with the symbolic construction, dissemination, and exchange of meaning, including the spread of global media, consumerism, language, and the blending of different traditions across borders.

METAPHORS OF GLOBALIZATION

1. Solid refers to the barriers that may prevent free movement and it can be natural or man-made. It may also refer to people, things, information, and places harden over time and therefore have limited mobility.
2. Liquidity refers to increasing ease of movement of people, things, information, and places in the global age.

Characteristics:

- I. Liquid is forever ready to change whatever shape it might take on momentarily and it is in continuous flux. This scenario can be seen in global finance by which an economy has never been stable at it changes from time to time
 - II. Liquid is difficult to stop once it is on the move such as the advances in technology.
 - III. Liquid tends to melt whatever stands in its path such as the political and economic barriers.
3. Flows refers to the movement of people, things, ideas, and culture across the globe due to the advances in technology, economic and political integration, and establishment of global policies that lessens and eliminates the existing borders.

Globalization Concept Map

Create a digital concept map that illustrates your understanding of introduction to globalization

Instructions:

- 1. Create your concept map using a digital platform.
- 2. Place "Globalization" at the center of your concept map.
- 3. Include the key economic, political, and cultural drivers of globalization and connect them with relevant concepts, examples, and current issues.
- 4. Use linking words or phrases to clearly show the relationships between ideas.
- 5. Incorporate appropriate icons, images, shapes, and color coding to improve clarity and visual appeal.
- 6. Ensure that your concept map is well-organized, accurate, and easy to read. All information must be your own work and properly summarized.
- 7. Export your finished concept map as a JPEG or PNG file and submit it through the assigned Google Drive on or before the deadline.

Rubric

Criteria	Excellent (20)	Very Good (16)	Good (12)	Needs Improvement (8)
1. Content Accuracy and Understanding	Concepts are accurate, relevant, and clearly demonstrate a strong understanding of globalization.	Concepts are mostly accurate and demonstrate good understanding.	Some concepts are unclear or contain minor inaccuracies.	Concepts show limited understanding or contain several inaccuracies.
2. Key Drivers and Related Concepts	Clearly includes economic, political, and cultural drivers , with relevant concepts, examples, and current issues.	Includes the three major drivers with adequate supporting concepts and examples.	Includes the major drivers but with limited supporting details.	One or more major drivers are missing or poorly developed.
3. Connections and Linking Words	Relationships between ideas are clear, logical, and effectively shown using appropriate linking words or phrases.	Most relationships are clear and logical.	Some connections are unclear or lack appropriate linking words.	Connections are confusing, incomplete, or difficult to understand.
4. Organization and Visual Design	Concept map is highly organized, easy to follow, visually appealing, and uses icons, images, shapes, and color coding effectively.	Well-organized and visually appealing with appropriate visual elements.	Organization and visual elements are adequate but could be improved.	Poorly organized, cluttered, or difficult to read.
5. Creativity, Originality, and Presentation	Demonstrates excellent creativity and originality. Information is properly summarized and presented in the student's own work.	Shows creativity and mostly original presentation.	Shows some creativity but relies on basic or common designs.	Shows little creativity or appears copied/not properly summarized.

UNIT 2

Historical Development of Globalization

ORIGINS AND HISTORY OF GLOBALIZATION

THE FIVE PERSPECTIVES ON THE ORIGIN OF GLOBALIZATION

1. Hardwired- proposes that globalization originated from the basic motivation of human beings to seek a better life (Chanda, 2007). History shows that our ancestors travel from Africa to other places in search of food and security.
2. Cycles- it explains that there is no single point of origin in globalization but it is a long term cyclical process wherein the current global age today is only a modification of the global age in the past. Thus, it should be noted that the global age today will be replaced by a new cycle of globalization in the future.
3. Epochs- if cycles explain a continuous long-term cyclical process, the epochs explain that there are waves of globalization that took place in the past and each of them has its own origin. Epoch is different from the perspective of the cycle as it argues that the previous epochs are not returning in the future.

The following are the great epoch: According to Therborn (2000).

- The fourth to the seventh centuries which witnessed the globalization of religions (e.g. Christianity, Islam).
- The late fifteenth-century highlighted by European colonial conquests.
- The late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries during which various Intra – European wars led to globalization.
- The mid-nineteenth century to 1918; the heyday of European imperialism.
- The post – World War II period.

4. Events- this perspective is different from cycles and epochs as it specifies the event that is somehow responsible for the origin of globalization. Some are examples of the point of origin from the perspective of Events:

- The spread of Christianity after the fall of the Roman Empire.
- The Other important Voyages such as the discovery of America by Christopher's Columbus in 1492, Vasco Da Gama rounding the Cape of Good Hope in 1498, and the circumnavigation of the globe completed in 1522 by one of Ferdinand Magellan's ships (Rosenthal, 2007)
- European Colonialism
- The founding of the modern Internet-based on Arpanet (which was created in 1969).

5. Broader, more recent Changes- this perspective views that the origin of globalization has taken place during the recent changes that happened in the 2nd half of the 20th Century. Scholars have identified three significant changes that shape the course of Humanity towards globalization.

- The emergence of the United States as the global power in the years following WW II
- The emergence of multinational corporations (MNCs).
- The demise of the Soviet Union and the end of the Cold War criticism on the Existing Evidence of Globalization.

GLOBALIZATION AS GLOBALONEY

1. Rejectionist- People who are against the utility of globalization as an incorrect analytical concept.
2. Sceptics- it emphasizes the limited nature of the globalizing process and that the world is not as integrated as it is.
3. Modifiers- It disputes the novelty of the process, implying that the label “globalization” has often been applied in a historically imprecise manner.

THEORIES OF GLOBALIZATION

1. World System Theory- this theory believes that capitalism has spread around the world for the last five centuries from 1500 to the present. In world Capitalism, the key structure is the three major division of labor of each country that has created hierarchy.

- a. Core- powerful, wealthy, and industrialized countries that usually control and benefit from the global market. Countries that are not as rich as the core countries usually depend on these core countries. These countries own most of the world's capital and technology and have great control over world trade and economic agreements.
- b. Peripheral- countries that are dependent on core countries for capital and have an underdeveloped industry. They generally provide labor and materials to core countries.
- c. Semi-Peripheral- Countries that share characteristics of both core and periphery countries. However, they also exploit peripheral countries just as core exploits the natural resources of peripheral countries.

2. World Polity Theory- It was developed as an analytical frame for interpreting global relations, structures, and practices. Invoking an image of the world as a system of interrelated interdependent units. It views the world system as a social system with a Cultural framework called world polity, which encompasses and influences the actors, such as nations, international organizations, and individuals under it.

3. World Culture Theory- It is a label for a particular interpretation of globalization that focuses on the way in which participants in the process become conscious of and give meaning to living in the world as a single place.

Impact of Globalization

1. HOMOGEINITY- It means an increasing sameness as information and ideas flow across boundaries.
2.
 - a. Cultural Imperialism is the growing international influence of a particular culture
 - Cultural-the role played by the American culture or the Americanization, the spread of Christianity.
 - Economic- Spread of the market economy throughout the world.
 - Political- Worldwide spread of models of the nation-state or the single model of governance around the world. Often times, this is called as Mcworld.
 - b. Media Imperialism is a subcategory under the broader umbrella of cultural Imperialism. From the traditional point of view, the western media and its technologies dominate countries belonging to less developed nations.
 - c. Mcdonaldization is the process wherein the principle of one of the dominant Fast-food restaurants in the United States of America is employed and used in almost different societies across the world. Its principle usually revolves around efficiency, Predictability, and technological advancement in production and marketing.
 - d. Globalization is the desires and ambitions of different entities such as organizations, corporations, and other nations to influence others and impose their power throughout the world. Their major goals include expanding their power and seeing that their profits grow across different parts of the world.
3. HETEROGENEITY- It is associated with the creation of local inputs leading to a variety of cultural hybrids. In other words, the predominance of locals would make a difference on a global scale. Thus, local is associated with heterogeneity and the dominance of Global is related to homogenous.
 - a. Globalization- it is the integration of global and local cultural inputs to create a blend resulting in a variety of cultural hybrids. It emphasizes diversity, Hybridity, and independence.

DYNAMICS OF GLOBAL AND LOCAL CULTURE

THREE PERSPECTIVES IN GLOBAL CULTURAL FLOW

1. Cultural Differentialism- It states that cultural differences are immutable and there is a likelihood that other culture which is significantly different from one culture may clash if they get to interact.
2. Cultural Hybridization- It refers to a politics of integration without the need to give up cultural identity.
3. Cultural Convergence- it supports the idea of global cultural homogeneity. It is the process of increasing sameness by adopting global culture, ideas, and practices.

Assessment # 2
Trend Analysis Report

Instructions: Create a Trend Analysis Report that examines the historical development of globalization by analyzing its origins, major theories, and global impacts. The report should demonstrate how globalization has evolved over time and explain the different perspectives that describe its development.

The report should include the following:

- 1. Introduction
 - Define globalization.
 - Briefly explain the purpose of the report.

- 2. Origins and History of Globalization
 - Discuss the Five Perspectives on the Origin of Globalization: Hardwired, Cycles, Epochs Events and Broader.
 - Explain how each perspective contributes to understanding the origins of globalization.

- 3. Globalization as a Concept
 - Compare the views of Rejectionists, Sceptics, and Modifiers regarding globalization.

- 4. Theories of Globalization
 - Describe how each theory explains globalization and its effects on societies: World System Theory, World Polity Theory and World Culture Theory

- 5. Impact of Globalization
 - Analyze the concepts of Homogeneity and Heterogeneity.

- 6. Conclusion
 - Summarize the major trends and insights from your analysis.
 - Reflect on how the historical development of globalization continues to influence today’s interconnected world.

Rubric

Criteria	Excellent (20)	Good (15)	Fair (10)	Needs Improvement (5)
1. Content and Understanding	Shows clear and accurate understanding of globalization and its history.	Shows good understanding with minor errors.	Shows basic understanding.	Shows limited understanding.
2. Origins and Perspectives	Clearly explains the five perspectives on the origins of globalization.	Explains most of the perspectives correctly.	Explains some perspectives.	Perspectives are missing or unclear.
3. Theories and Views	Clearly explains the three theories and the views of Rejectionists, Sceptics, and Modifiers.	Explains most theories and views correctly.	Provides basic explanations.	Explanations are incomplete or inaccurate.
4. Impact and Analysis	Clearly analyzes homogeneity and heterogeneity and gives relevant examples.	Provides good analysis and examples.	Provides basic analysis.	Provides little or unclear analysis.
5. Organization and Writing	Report is well-organized, easy to read, and has very few errors.	Report is organized with minor errors.	Some parts are unclear or have several errors.	Report is poorly organized and difficult to understand.

UNIT 3

Global Governance and Economic Policies

I. What is global governance and what it does?

Global governance is a continuous process of balancing different interests and initiating cooperative action between different countries. Governments in countries need cooperation and integration to have a just system for conflict resolution. However, there is no such thing as a "world government".

Set of norms, policies, laws, or regulations are needed to facilitate relations within countries and amongst countries, organizations and market. This is an example of global governance. Global Governance is needed when a state or a country do not have the capacity to solve problems on their own. There are cases whereby groups of countries have problems with each other. These countries cannot solve the problem by themselves. Global Governance is also needed.

Factors behind the Emergence of Global Governance

With the increasing economic prowess in key areas such as energy, food, transport, and healthcare, global corporations are becoming more powerful. They yield a strong influence on many global policies. Global civil society organizations also have a strong voice and influence on global matters as they have established historical credibility, relevance, and effectiveness in resolving problems in times of conflict or disaster.

1. Permeability of nation-states to vast flows of things

Fake news, cyberbullying, invasion of privacy and other digital fraudulent activities are the results of easy, fast, and difficult-to-control flow of digital information through social media. This calls for global governance because a single nation-state cannot tackle these issues on their own.

2. Mass migration of people and the flow of criminal elements

The migration of people may result in some forms of unlawful activities such as sex trafficking and the pushing of illegal drugs. This calls for global governance as it needs strong regulatory policies, international cooperation, and effective implementation of the law for the protection of the citizens.

3. Internal events or problems which nation-states either instigate or are unable to control on their own

One great example of this is the extrajudicial killings in the Philippines. The drug policy of the Philippine government or also known as the "war on drugs" has led to mass protests and violence. This calls for intervention from international organizations, however, the Philippine government has resisted.

4. Global problems that a single nation-state is unable to tackle on their own

The global financial crisis is an example of a problem wherein states do not have the capacity to solve on their own. This calls for global governance. Another example: The COVID-19 Pandemic

ROLES OF THE UNITED NATIONS IN GLOBAL GOVERNANCE (un.org)

There is no "Central Authority" in Global Governance but the United Nations comes close to being a "Central Authority" to raise and resolve global issues as they have the capability to involve many non-state actors (governmental and non-governmental organizations, etc).

What is the United Nations?

The United Nations is an international organization founded in 1945 after World War II. It is currently made up of 193 Member States. It fosters cooperation among nation-states to address global problems.

Main Bodies of the United Nations General Assembly

General Assembly is the main deliberative Policy - making, and representative body of the United Nations. It is where all member-states come together to discuss and resolve various global issues.

- Security Council: It has primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security. It is composed of 15 members: the United States of America, Britain, Russia, China, and France as permanent members and ten other non-permanent members on a two-year term.
- Economic and Social Council: It is the principal body for coordination, policy review, policy dialogue and recommendations on economic, social, environmental, and other related concerns along with specialized agencies and organizations such as IMF, UNESCO, WHO and etc. It is the United Nations' central platform for reflection, debate, and innovative thinking on sustainable development.
- Trusteeship Council: It provides international supervision for eleven Trust Territories to ensure that adequate steps were taken to prepare the Territories for self-government and interdependence. But it suspended its operations after the last of the trust territories attained independence in 1994.
- International Court of Justice: it is referred to as the World Court, is the principal judicial body of the United Nations. It is the only one of the main bodies of the United Nations not located in New York, USA. The Peace Palace in Hague, Netherlands provides the venue for countries to settle disputes inside a court of law.
- Secretariat: It assists the other bodies and committees while performing varied tasks. It comprises the Secretary-General and tens of thousands of international UN staff members who carry out the day-to-day work of the UN as mandated by the General Assembly. The Secretary-General is chief administrative officer of the Organization, appointed by the General Assembly on the recommendation of the Security Council.

Roles and Functions of the United Nations (un.org)

1. Maintain International Peace and Security -The United Nations came into being in 1945, following the devastation of the Second World War, with one central mission: the maintenance of international peace and security. The UN does this by working to prevent conflict; helping parties in conflict make peace; peacekeeping; and creating the conditions to allow peace to hold and flourish. These activities often overlap and should reinforce one another, to be effective.
2. Protection of Human Rights- The promotion and protection of human rights is a key purpose and guiding principle of the Organization. In 1948, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights brought human rights into the realm of international law. Since then, the Organization has diligently protected human rights through legal instruments and on-the-ground activities.
3. Deliver Humanitarian Aid- One of the purposes of the United Nations is to achieve international co-operation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural, or humanitarian character. The organization relied upon by the international community to coordinate humanitarian relief operations due to natural and man-made disasters in areas beyond the relief capacity of national authorities alone.
4. Promote Sustainable Development- From the start in 1945, one of the main priorities of the United Nations was to achieve international cooperation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural or humanitarian character. Improving people's well-being continues to be one of the main focuses of the UN. Sustainable development promotes prosperity and economic opportunity, greater social well-being, and protection of the environment.
5. Uphold International Law- The UN Charter, in its Preamble, set an objective: "to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained". Ever since, the development of,

and respect for international law has been a key part of the work of the Organization. This work is carried out in many ways -by courts, tribunals, multilateral treaties -and by the Security Council, which can approve peacekeeping missions, impose sanctions, or authorize the use of force when there is a threat to international peace and security.

Since 1945, the United Nations has been a champion of the following global concerns:

- Preventing and managing conflicts
- Empowering women
- Regulating armaments
- Educating children
- Championing human rights and
- Feeding the hungry
- international humanitarian law Housing the refugees
- Liberating the colonized Coordinating disaster relief and
- Providing economic and technical assistance aid in newly liberated countries

Some Key Challenges

1. Nationalistic Interests: The challenging part of getting countries' cooperation for the sake of global interest is their differences in terms of national agenda or preferences. Country leaders always have to choose between balancing acts or to give-in unpopular decisions to go against international norms. Example: Territorial disputes between China and the Philippines

2. Lack of Consensus or General Agreement: It is difficult to come up with a common vision and agreed action plan if major powers are often hesitant to engage less prominent stakeholders on issues. Example: Nuclear Energy policies

3. Indistinct and diffused authority: States can evade international laws with no major consequences. They assert their sovereignty when dealing with international disputes.

4. Incoherent policies on emerging trends: Global Governance is too slow to catch up with global issues or dilemmas brought by the speed of technological changes. In today's digital world, the challenge is how to mainline the free flow of information while having appropriate policies to control cyber aggression.

GLOBALIZATION AND THE STATE

- The Relevance of the State amid Globalization States' legitimacy is not based on how it can handle globalization. It is based on how effective it can utilize its public goods rather than the other actors in the process of globalization. There are few cases only where the other actors are more effective and competent in addressing specific issues than the States. Until or unless various actors can perform better services than what the State does now on a macro scale, then the State will continue to be a major force in globalization.
- The Difference between Nation and the State The state is a distinctive political community with its own government which asserts sovereignty over its land and people. A nation is a large group of people who inhabit a specific territory and are connected by history, culture, or another commonality. Nation-State is a sovereign institution that governs individuals sharing a collective history and culture within a bounded territory. The state is considered as the representative of "the people" and the people are the source of the state's legitimacy and sovereignty.

II. ECONOMIC POLICIES

GLOBAL ECONOMY

Local products of the Philippines such as Marikina Shoes, Datu Puti Vinegar, Philippine Dried Fish, and other products are usually available not only here in the Philippines but also in other countries such as in America and Canada. The accumulation, importation, and exportation of goods and commodities from one country to other countries and vice-versa is best explained by the economic globalization. Economic Globalization refers to the increasing interdependence of world economies as a result of the growing scale of cross-border trade of commodities and services, flow of international capital and wide and rapid spread of technologies (Shangquan, 2000). Economic globalization is not only limited in goods as it also involves, capital, labor, migration and anything that is related to goods and services. From the viewpoint of the International Monetary Fund, Economic Globalization is a historical process that was the outcome of human evolution from traditional and primitive technology to the present technological advancement. It refers to the increasing integration of economies around the world, mainly through the movement of goods, services, and capital across borders.

Interconnected Dimensions of Economic Globalization

1. Goods and Services: Goods are tangible objects that satisfy people's wants. Services are actions, such as haircuts and car repair, which also satisfy people's wants.
2. Capital: It is the total assets a company needs to stay solvent. A company's capital assets are significant because organizations use capital assets to create wealth.
3. Communication and Technology: Advances in Communication and technology has allowed the integration of economies worldwide through increases in trade, investment flows, and technology transfer.
4. Market Exchange: it is an economic system in which goods and services are produced, distributed, and exchanged by the forces of price, supply, and demand.

ECONOMIES ASSOCIATED WITH ECONOMIC GLOBALIZATION PROTECTIONISM:

1. Protectionism refers to government policies that restrict international trade by imposing tariffs, quotas, product standards, and subsidies.

Reason for the implementation of strict policies:

- Its goal is to improve the domestic economy by forcing its citizen either direct or indirect to purchase local products instead of imported products.
- For safety and quality concerns of both imported and exported products.

Primary policy tools

Tariffs: These are charges to importing countries in the form of either money or goods that will serve as a payment for allowing its international products to be sold in the local market. It also raises revenues of the government and protects domestic products from foreign competition due to the price hike of imported goods.

Import Quotas: This is a kind of tariffs that lessens the number of products that can be imported for a certain period of time. It protects its domestic businesses by allowing its local businesses to cover the shortfall of certain products. Thus, it helps the local market to increase its production that may also increase the number of local products in market.

Product Standards: This is a kind of barrier that imposes strict standards in imported products which may make it difficult for different importing countries to bring their goods in the local market. Thus, the restriction increases the volume of local products.

Government Subsidies: incentives and cash payments are distributed to domestic businesses to encourage them to expand their market globally by increasing international export. Thus, the government may strengthen its local market.

Advantages of Protectionism:

- Taxes imposed on exporter countries may increase government revenues.
- Strict and rigid policies may protect domestic product
- Encourages the exportation of national products which may expand their products globally.

Disadvantages of protectionism:

- Protectionism policies often time support other countries to make their own protection policy as well. Hence, it inhibits the exportation of each other products that may result in less profit.
- 2. TRADE LIBERALIZATION: It is the process of removing or reducing the barriers or restrictions in the exchange for goods between and among nations. With the reduction of barriers such as tariffs and import quotas in the process of exchanging goods and services, it significantly reduces the cost of goods sold by the importing countries. Thereby, allowing an increase of exchange between and among countries. Thus, the proponents of trade liberalization believe that reduction of barriers ultimately lessen consumer costs while increasing efficiency, and fostering the growth of the economy.

Advantages of Trade Liberalization

- As it promotes free trade between and among countries, the cost of importing nations in bringing their goods to other countries is most likely to be lessened. This event may likely result in lower consumer prices due to lower fees of importing nation and an increase in competition among local and international businesses.
- Promotes efficient use and allocation of world resources
- Increases Capital Flow
- Allows developing countries access to the heavily protected markets of the developed world thus helping promote development
- It encourages specialization among countries by maximizing their capabilities whether to manufacture goods or provide services. This scenario is related to the concept of comparative advantage wherein one specializes in which they can gain the most profitable.
- It can lead to a higher efficiency of producers.
- It can attract foreign investment

Disadvantages of Trade Liberalization

- It can affect local businesses and their domestic product.
- The possible risk may be experienced if the products or raw materials coming from other countries have a lower environmental standard.
- Developing nations may be threatened to back out in the global market as they are forced to compete in the same market with other nations possessing stronger economies.
- Countries with lower educational standards may struggle to adapt to a changing economic environment.
- It can exploit the natural resources due to the competition and shallow environmental policies in a country.
- It can lead to structured unemployment whereby countries and companies who cannot compete with others may lose gain and have less profit that may result in layoff.

WORLD SYSTEM THEORY

For Wallerstein, "a world-system is a social system that has boundaries, structures, member groups, rules of legitimation, and coherence. Its life is made up of the conflicting forces which hold it together by tension and tear it apart as each group seeks eternally to remould it to its advantage. A world-system is what Wallerstein terms a "world economy", integrated through the market rather than a political center, in which two or more regions are interdependent concerning necessities like food, fuel, and protection, and two or more polities compete for domination without the emergence of one single center forever. World system theory is, in many ways, an adaptation of the dependency theory.

Wallerstein draws heavily from the dependency theory, a neo-Marxist explanation of development processes, famous in the developing world. Dependency theory focuses on understanding the "periphery" by looking at core-periphery relations, and it has flourished in peripheral regions like Latin America. Wallerstein proposes different categories, core, semi-periphery, and periphery into which all regions of the world can be placed. Of the three, two are of the uttermost importance: core and periphery. These are geographically and culturally different, focusing on labor-intensive (Periphery), and the other on capital-intensive production(core). The core-periphery relationship is structural. Semi-peripheral states act as a buffer zone between core and periphery and have a mix of the kinds of activities and institutions that exist on them.

ECONOMIC INTEGRATION

El-Agraa (1998) defines the term economic integration as the discriminatory removal of all trade impediments between at least two participating countries and the establishment of certain elements of coordination and cooperation between them. In other words, Economic integration is an arrangement among nations that typically includes the reduction or elimination of trade barriers and the coordination of monetary and fiscal policies. Economic integration aims to reduce costs for both consumers and producers and to increase trade between the countries involved in the agreement.

Levels of Economic Integration

- Preferential trading area- Allow member countries to have access to some of their products. Tariffs are not eliminated but it is lessened as compared to nonparticipating countries
- Free trade- It aimed to reduce the tariff significantly between or among partnered countries. In regards to external countries which are not part of their agreement, each of them has its own decision making in regards to the tariff they will impose on those external countries. The general goal of free trade agreements is to develop economies of scale and comparative advantages, which promotes economic efficiency.
- Custom union- It almost the same with free trade agreement as it aims to reduce and abolish the tariff but it differs from free trade as the member country has common external tariffs among member countries, implying that the same tariffs are applied to third countries; a common trade regime is achieved.
- Common market- It is an integration by which member countries are able to move their capital and services within their organization. This leads to the expansion of scale economies and the maximization of comparative advantages. However, each national market has its own regulations such as product standards.
- Economic union: known as a single market In this integration, Tariffs are eliminated within the member countries by which they are able to exercise free trade among other countries. Likewise, workers from a member country of this organization can migrate and work to another member country. At this level, some policies related to economic and political aspects are also integrated such as the existence of a common currency to be used by each member country like the Euro of European Union.
- Political union- It is a form of integration wherein member countries abide by the rules presented by a common government in which the member country's sovereignty is reduced significantly.

ASSESSMENT 3
Comparative Case Study

Instructions:

1. Form a group of 5-6 members.
2. Read both Case Study A (Philippine Economy) and Case Study B (Local Community) carefully.
3. Complete the Comparison Matrix by identifying the:
 - Main global policy
 - Positive impacts
 - Negative impacts
 - Groups most affected
 - Long-term effects
4. Answer all six guide questions using information from the case studies. Support your answers with clear explanations and examples from the cases.
5. Work collaboratively by ensuring that each group member contributes to the discussion, analysis, and presentation.
6. Submit the completed comparison matrix and written answers to the guide questions at the end of the activity.

Case Study A: Philippine Economy

The Philippines entered several international trade agreements that reduced tariffs and encouraged foreign investments. As a result, multinational companies established businesses in the country, creating jobs and increasing exports. However, local industries faced stronger competition from imported products, causing some small businesses to struggle.

Case Study B: Local Community

A farming community experienced an increase in imported agricultural products after trade liberalization. Consumers enjoyed lower prices, but many local farmers found it difficult to compete because imported products were cheaper. Some farmers shifted to other livelihoods, while others sought government assistance and cooperative programs.

Comparison Matrix

Aspect	Philippine Economy	Local Community
1. Main global policy
2. Positive impacts
3. Negative impacts
4. Groups most affected
5. Long-term effects

Guide Questions:

1. What global economic policy influenced both cases?
2. How did the policy benefit the Philippine economy?
3. What challenges did local communities experience?
4. Why do the impacts differ between the national and local levels?
5. What government actions can help communities adjust to global economic changes?
6. Do you think globalization creates more opportunities or more challenges? Explain your answer using evidence from the cases.

Rubric

Criteria	Excellent (10 pts)	Good (8 pts)	Satisfactory (6 pts)	Needs Improvement (4 pts)	Points
1. Comparison Matrix	All sections are completed accurately with thorough comparisons between the Philippine economy and local community.	Most sections are complete and accurate with minor omissions.	Some sections are incomplete or lack clear comparisons.	Matrix is incomplete or contains inaccurate information.	/10
2. Analysis and Responses to Guide Questions	All six questions are answered accurately with insightful analysis, clear explanations, and evidence from the case studies.	Most questions are answered accurately with adequate explanations and evidence.	Answers show basic understanding but lack depth or supporting evidence.	Responses are incomplete, inaccurate, or show limited understanding.	/10
3. Critical Thinking and Policy Recommendations	Demonstrates excellent critical thinking by evaluating both benefits and challenges and providing realistic, well-supported recommendations.	Demonstrates good analysis with appropriate recommendations.	Shows limited analysis and recommendations need further development.	Provides little analysis and recommendations are unclear or irrelevant.	/10
4. Organization, Clarity, and Quality of Work	Output is well-organized, logical, free of errors, and professionally presented.	Generally organized with few errors that do not affect understanding.	Organization is inconsistent with several errors.	Work is poorly organized and difficult to understand.	/10
5. Group Collaboration and Participation	All members actively contributed, collaborated effectively, and shared responsibilities equally.	Most members participated actively with minor imbalance in contributions.	Some members participated while others had limited involvement.	Minimal collaboration; work was completed by only a few members.	/10

Globalization and Cultural Change

Globalization has made the world more interconnected through advances in technology, communication, trade, migration, and transportation. As people interact across borders, cultures continuously influence one another. While globalization creates opportunities for cultural exchange and innovation, it also raises concerns about preserving local traditions, languages, and identities.

How Does Globalization Affect Culture?

1. Cultural Diffusion- The spread of cultural items such as ideas, styles, religions, technologies, and languages between individuals or groups. It is a core concept in anthropology and geography that explains how societies change and share traits through trade, migration, war, and communication.

Examples:

- Korean pop music (K-pop)
- Japanese anime
- American fast-food chains
- International fashion trends

2. Cultural Homogenization- The process by which diverse local cultures around the world become more alike and adopt a single, dominant global lifestyle. Driven heavily by multinational corporations, digital media, and Western expansion, it often results in the loss of distinct regional traditions, local languages, and indigenous practices.

Examples:

- Similar shopping malls around the world
- Global brands such as Nike, Apple, and McDonald's
- Western-style clothing becoming common worldwide

3. Cultural Hybridization- The blending of different cultural elements to create new, unique forms of expression. It happens through global flows, migration, and trade, resulting in mixed traditions rather than total replacement.

Examples in the Philippines:

- Filipino-style spaghetti
- OPM influenced by Western and Korean music
- Fusion restaurants combining Filipino and international cuisines

4. Cultural Preservation- The active practice of protecting tangible items like historic buildings and art, and intangible elements like local languages, folklore, and traditions, so that a community's unique identity and shared history survive for future generations.

Examples:

- Online museums
- Digital archives
- Social media promoting local traditions
- Indigenous communities documenting their languages

What are Global Cultural Shifts?

It refers to deep, widespread changes in the values, beliefs, traditions, and behaviors shared by societies around the world. Driven heavily by digital technology, international migration, and economic networks, these shifts reshape how people connect, view identity, and consume media.

Examples:

- The popularity of K-pop and Korean dramas worldwide.
- The widespread use of English as an international language.
- The global influence of Western fashion and fast-food chains.

Preservation of Local Traditions

Local traditions are the customs, beliefs, practices, languages, festivals, arts, and values that define a community's cultural identity. Preserving local traditions protects a community's unique identity, history, and values from fading away due to modern changes and global influences. It involves keeping alive oral stories, native languages, arts, crafts, and community celebrations so future generations understand their roots.

Examples in the Philippines:

- Celebrating local festivals such as Sinulog, Panagbenga, and Kadayawan.
- Preserving indigenous weaving traditions like T'nalak and Inabel.
- Practicing Filipino values such as bayanihan, pagmamano, and respect for elders.
- Promoting Filipino languages, literature, music, and folk dances.

Relating Global Cultural Shifts to the Preservation of Local Traditions

Global cultural shifts and the preservation of local traditions are interconnected. As globalization introduces new ideas and lifestyles, communities face the challenge of embracing global opportunities without losing their cultural identity.

Globalization can support cultural preservation by:

- Using social media to promote local festivals and traditions.
- Digitizing historical documents, languages, and cultural artifacts.
- Encouraging cultural tourism that showcases local heritage.
- Connecting local artisans to global markets.

However, globalization can also threaten local traditions by:

- Encouraging the adoption of foreign lifestyles at the expense of local customs.
- Causing younger generations to lose interest in traditional practices.
- Contributing to the decline of indigenous languages and cultural practices.

ASSESSMENT 4
Cultural Reflection Paper

Instructions

- 1. Write a Cultural Reflection Paper discussing how globalization and global cultural shifts affect local traditions and cultural identity.
- 2. Your reflection should connect your personal observations or experiences with the concepts discussed in class.
- 3. Upload your report (PDF format) to the designated Google Drive folder on or before the submission deadline.

Structure

Introduction- Introduce globalization and explain how it has contributed to cultural change.

Body- Discuss the global cultural shifts you observe and explain how they influence local traditions. Include both positive and negative effects.

Personal Reflection- Share your own thoughts, observations, or experiences regarding globalization and Filipino culture.

Conclusion- Explain why preserving local traditions remains important in a rapidly changing and interconnected world. End with a specific action that young people can take to protect and promote Filipino culture

Rubric

Criteria	Excellent (10)	Good (8)	Satisfactory (6)	Needs Improvement (4)
1. Understanding of Globalization	Demonstrates a clear and thorough understanding of globalization and cultural change.	Demonstrates a good understanding with minor gaps.	Demonstrates basic understanding but lacks depth.	Shows limited or unclear understanding.
2. Connection to Local Traditions	Clearly and meaningfully relates global cultural shifts to the preservation of local traditions.	Makes a clear connection between globalization and local traditions.	Makes a limited connection between the two.	Fails to establish a meaningful connection.
3. Critical Thinking & Analysis	Provides insightful analysis of both positive and negative effects of globalization on culture.	Provides good analysis with relevant examples.	Provides simple analysis with limited examples.	Provides little or no analysis.
4. Personal Reflection	Presents a thoughtful, authentic, and meaningful personal reflection.	Presents a relevant personal reflection.	Presents a basic reflection with limited personal insight.	Provides little personal reflection.
5. Organization & Writing	Paper is well-organized, coherent, and grammatically clear.	Paper is organized with minor writing errors.	Paper has some organizational and grammatical problems.	Paper is poorly organized and difficult to understand.

UNIT 5

Global Population Trends

Population growth is the increase in the number of humans on Earth. For most of human history our population size was relatively stable. But with innovation and industrialization, energy, food, water, and medical care became more available and reliable. Consequently, global human population rapidly increased, and continues to do so, with dramatic impacts on global climate and ecosystems. We will need technological and social innovation to help us support the world's population as we adapt to and mitigate climate and environmental changes.

Population Changes due to:

- Births (Fertility): The number of live births added to a population. Higher fertility rates increase the population size.
- Deaths (Mortality): The number of deaths reducing a population. Lower death rates and longer life expectancies contribute to overall growth.
- Immigration: The process of moving into a new country to live there.
- Emigration: The process of leaving out of your old home country to live somewhere else.

Growth Rate Formula

- Percentage Growth Rate: $(\text{Population Change} \div \text{Initial Population}) \times 100$
- Per Capita Growth Rate: $(B + I) - (D + E)$ divided by the initial population size.

Core Components

- B (Births): Number of individuals born.
- D (Deaths): Number of individuals who die.
- I (Immigration): Number of individuals entering the area.
- E (Emigration): Number of individuals leaving the area.

The global population stands at approximately 8.25 billion people, growing at a slowing annual rate of about 0.8%. According to the United Nations, the worldwide total is projected to peak in the mid-2080s at roughly 10.3 billion before stabilizing.

Key Growth and Decline Shifts

- Slowing overall growth: Annual additions have dropped from a peak of 2.3% in the 1960s down to under 1% today due to declining global birth rates.
- India leads in numbers: India remains the most populous nation (approx. 1.47 billion), while China's population has entered a declining phase.
- Regional divergences: Over 60 countries have already peaked in population size, led by nations like China, Germany, and Russia, while Sub-Saharan Africa drives the vast majority of active global growth.

Aging and Demographics

- Rising median age: The global median age continues to climb, moving from 24 years in 1950 toward an older global average.
- Older populations: By the late 2070s, people aged 65 and older are projected to outnumber children under the age of 18.
- Shifting life expectancy: Global average life expectancy has surpassed 73 years and continues to rise with modern health improvements.

Population growth directly increases the total demand for fixed or finite natural goods, which accelerates the depletion of essentials like fresh water, arable land, and energy. As more people compete for these limited supplies, availability per person drops. This imbalance triggers widespread shortages and heavy environmental stress.

Core Drivers and Pressures

- Increased Demand: More individuals require higher volumes of food, water, and shelter, pushing consumption rates past natural replenishment limits.
- Intensive Use: Expanding populations force intensive farming, urbanization, and industrialization, leading to soil exhaustion and deforestation.
- Carrying Capacity: Earth or local ecosystems possess a carrying capacity—a maximum limit of individuals they can support based on the least abundant resource. Exceeding this limit causes resource crashes.

Social and Environmental Consequences

- Water and Food Insecurity: Aquifers deplete and agricultural plots shrink or lose fertility under population pressure.
- Infrastructure Strain: Public services, waste management, and healthcare struggle to keep pace with rapid community expansion.
- Conflict: Localized scarcity frequently raises the risk of social friction or competition over remaining land and water supplies.

ASSESSMENT 5

DATA VISUALIZATION PROJECT

Instructions

Form 5 members per group

1. Research population growth and its effect on natural resources.
2. Choose one resource to focus on:
 - Water
 - Food
 - Land
 - Energy
3. Find reliable data showing population growth and/or resource demand.
4. Organize your data in a simple table.
5. Create one graph or chart to visualize your data.
6. Analyze the graph and identify 3 important trends or observations.
7. Explain how population growth can contribute to resource scarcity.
8. Present your output to the class. (Students should briefly explain their data, graph, observations, and conclusion.)

Required Output

1. Title

2. Data Table

3. Data Visualization

Use one: Line graph, Bar graph or Pie chart

4. Data Interpretation

Write 3 observations based on your graph.

5. Population–Resource Connection

Write 3–5 sentences answering: How does population growth contribute to resource scarcity?

6. Conclusion

Write 2–3 sentences about what you learned.

7. Sources

List the sources used for your data.

Upload your report (PDF format) to the designated Google Drive folder on or before the submission deadline.

RUBRIC

Criteria	Excellent	Good	Satisfactory	Needs Improvement	Points
1. Data Accuracy & Relevance	Data are accurate, relevant, complete, and clearly related to population growth and the chosen resource.	Data are mostly accurate and relevant with minor gaps.	Some data are relevant but have noticeable gaps or errors.	Data are inaccurate, incomplete, or not relevant.	20
2. Data Table	Data are complete, organized, easy to read, and properly labeled.	Data are organized with minor errors or missing labels.	Data are somewhat organized but need improvement.	Data are incomplete or difficult to understand.	10
3. Data Visualization	Graph/chart is appropriate, accurate, clearly labeled, and easy to understand.	Graph/chart is appropriate and mostly clear with minor errors.	Graph/chart is present but has some labeling or accuracy problems.	Graph/chart is missing, inappropriate, or difficult to interpret.	20
4. Data Interpretation	Provides 3 clear and insightful observations accurately based on the data.	Provides 3 relevant observations with minor weaknesses.	Provides fewer than 3 observations or observations are only partly supported by the data.	Observations are unclear or unrelated to the data.	15
5. Population–Resource Connection	Clearly explains how population growth contributes to resource scarcity using strong connections to the chosen resource.	Explains the connection clearly with minor gaps.	Provides a basic explanation but lacks depth or clarity.	Explanation is unclear, incomplete, or does not establish the connection.	15
6. Conclusion	Provides a clear and meaningful 2–3 sentence conclusion based on the findings.	Conclusion is clear but could be more connected to the findings.	Conclusion is present but too general.	Conclusion is missing or unclear.	10
7. Sources & Documentation	All data sources are clearly listed and reliable.	Sources are listed with minor omissions.	Some sources are provided but documentation is incomplete.	Sources are missing or unclear.	5
8. Presentation & Group Participation	Clearly and confidently presents the data, graph, observations, and conclusion; members participate actively.	Presentation is clear and most members participate.	Presentation is understandable but participation is uneven.	Presentation is unclear and/or participation is very limited.	5

Sustainable Development and Local Communities

SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

The term sustainable development first came to known in the world conservation strategy (WCS) in 1980. It achieved a new status with the publication of two significant reports by Brundtland on North and South: a programmed for survival and common crisis (1985). Our Common Future (1983) and has gained even greater attention since the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development (UNCED) held in Rio de Janeiro in June 1992.

Sustainable development is a pattern of resource use that aims to meet human needs while preserving the environment so that these needs can be met not only in the present but also for future generations. According to Brundtland, sustainable development is a development that meets the needs of the present without compromising future generations to meet their own needs. Brundtland's concept of sustainable development emphasizes the links between development and environmental problems, and to promote political and economic change locally, nationally and globally to tackle the problems.

PILLARS OF SUSTAINABILITY

Generally, there is a common thread across these definitions and that is the presence of 3 pillars of Sustainability and these are the Environment, Society, and the Economy.

Environmental Sustainability

It is being mindful that the world's natural resources such are energy fuels, water, plants and animals are limited. It is being conscious to use natural resources at a rate that don't get depleted, doesn't get damaged, or get extinct.

Economic Sustainability

It means that countries and businesses must use their resources efficiently and responsibly. If countries and companies will not use their resources efficiently and if they don't act responsibly, then they will not be able to sustain their own activities in the long term.

Social Sustainability

It is the ability of a society or any social system to persistently achieve a good social well - being. This ensures that the social well - being of a country, an organization or community can be maintained in the long term.

MODELS OF SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

There are different views on how the 3 pillars are interlinked. This gave rise to the different Models of Sustainable Development:

Legged Stool Model

The 3 legs are required for sustainability; if one leg is weak, the whole system gets weak. It implies that the 3 legs operate independently and are equal in contribution.

Overlapping Circles Model

This model acknowledges the intersection and interdependence of the 3 pillars. It is in the area of intersection of the 3 pillars where sustainability lies. This also implies that there are certain segments of each pillar that are independent of the others (parts of the circle that do not overlap). The size of the circles can be adjusted if one pillar has greater influence over the other 2 pillars.

Nested Dependencies Model

In this model, the 3 pillars co-exist and are interdependent. This tackle the well - being of the total system is achieved only if the well- being of each subsystem is achieved. This implies the symbiotic relationship of the economy-society and social environment. This also implies that society has to live within the carrying capacity of the environment.

United Nations Sustainable Development Goals

In 2015, the 193 member countries of the United Nations accepted the challenge to work together towards progress while protecting human rights and ensuring the proper use of the world's limited resources. They were able to formulate the 17 Sustainable Development Goals. This goal is target to achieve by 2030.

What is new and different about the 17 SDGs?

First, and most importantly, these Goals apply to every nation and every sector. Cities, businesses, schools, organizations, all are challenged to act. This is called Universality.

Second, it is recognized that the Goals are all inter-connected, in a system. We cannot aim to achieve just one goal. We must achieve them all. This is called Integration.

And finally, it is widely recognized that achieving these Goals involves making very big, fundamental changes in how we live on Earth. This is called Transformation.

ASSESSMENT # 6

Sustainability Policy Brief

Instructions

1. This is an individual activity.
2. Choose one sustainability issue in your local community.
Examples:
 - Waste management
 - Water conservation
 - Food security
 - Air pollution
 - Sustainable transportation
 - Renewable energy
 - Protection of natural resources
3. Research the chosen issue using at least 2 reliable sources.
4. Create a 1–2 page Sustainability Policy Brief containing the following:
 - A. Policy Title- Create a clear and meaningful title for your proposed policy.
 - B. Local Problem- Describe the sustainability problem and explain how it affects the community.
 - C. Evidence- Provide at least 2 facts or pieces of data that support the existence of the problem.
 - D. Proposed Policy Framework- Propose a practical solution.
 - E. Conclusion- Explain why your proposed policy is important for achieving sustainable development in the community.

Rubric

Total: 20 Points

Criteria	Excellent (4)	Good (3)	Fair (2)	Needs Improvement (1)
1. Policy Title	Clear, meaningful, and directly related to the issue	Clear and related to the issue	Somewhat related but unclear	Missing or not related
2. Local Problem	Clearly explains the problem and its effects on the community	Explains the problem and some effects	Provides limited explanation	Problem is unclear or poorly explained
3. Evidence	Provides 2 or more relevant and reliable facts/data	Provides 2 relevant facts/data with minor issues	Provides only 1 relevant fact/data	Provides little or no supporting evidence
4. Proposed Policy Framework	Presents a practical, clear, and well-developed solution	Presents a practical solution with adequate details	Solution is somewhat practical but lacks details	Solution is unclear or unrealistic
5. Conclusion	Clearly explains the importance of the policy for sustainable community development	Explains the importance of the policy	Provides a limited explanation	Conclusion is unclear or missing

UNIT 7

Global Citizenship and Ethics

Today, we lived in a much-interconnected world. Each individual's action has ripple effects on his immediate family, his community, his environment, his country, and even to the whole world. Every country's policies, decisions, calamities, and crisis have far reaching repercussions to other parts of the world. Technology is breaking down geographical boundaries and has ushered faster, different, and more affordable ways for people to communicate, travel, trade, work and education.

When it comes to people, global mobility, multi – racial families, multi – cultural work force is now becoming the norm rather than the exception. There are many people who were born and raised in one country but are now residing and have adopted the culture of another country. As a result, we are experiencing new and different kind's challenges, conflicts and crisis that are also global in nature and in scope such as;

- Gender Inequality
- Religious Intolerance
- Bullying
- Sexual Harassment
- Political Conflict
- Global Warming
- Racism

Now, more than ever calls for a global collective effort to help solve the challenges of the contemporary times. This means that global challenges need global solutions

GLOBAL CITIZENSHIP

Global citizenship according to Oxfam, is all about encouraging young people to develop the knowledge, skills and values they need to engage with the world. And it's about the belief that we can all make a difference. It is a way of living that acknowledges that our world is an increasingly complex web of connections and interdependencies. Global citizenship encourages individuals to think deeply and critically about what is equitable and just, and what will minimize harm to our planet.

Global citizenship is loosely defined as recognizing that every human has an interconnected life. This means that in every action that we do, we must always think about how we can affect other people. Global citizenship is also about respecting cultural diversity. This means that we must respect different races and communities in our world today. Respecting human rights is also a focus of global citizenship. This means that someone can help someone by promoting social justices and fight social injustices. Another definition of global citizenship is empathizing with the suffering of people around the world. It is seeing the world as how others see it. We must feel that our suffering is not less and not greater to the suffering of other people. This fee can awaken our sense of responsibility, not only to ourselves but for the feelings of other people around us. Being a global citizen also means having a sense of moral responsibility to the planet that we live in. Earth is our hope and we must know to protect, preserve and nurture it. Not only for the sake of this generation but also for the sake of the future generation. We must think about them, how they will survive this world in the future. In other words, a global citizen considers himself or herself not just a citizen of a single place but considers his/her identify as transcending geographical borders and behave and thinks as a member of humanity and not just of a single nationality.

Global Citizen

A Global Citizen is someone who

- is aware of the wider world and has a sense of their own role as a world citizen
- respects and values diversity
- has an understanding of how the world works
- is outraged by social injustice
- participates in the community at a range of levels, from the local to the global
- is willing to act to make the world a more equitable and sustainable place
- takes responsibility for their actions.

A global citizen is someone who identifies with being part of an emerging world community and whose actions contribute to building this community's values and practices. Such a definition of global citizenship is based on two assumptions which is such a thing as an emerging world community to which people can identify and that such a community has an ascent set of values and practices. To be effective Global Citizens, young people need to be flexible, creative and proactive. They need to be able to solve problems, make decisions, think critically, communicate ideas effectively and work well within teams and groups. These skills and attributes are increasingly recognized as being essential to succeed in other areas of 21st century life too, including many workplaces. These skills and qualities cannot be developed without the use of active learning methods through which pupils learn by doing and by collaborating with others.

Characteristics of a Global Citizen

- Respects multiculturalism
- Teamwork and cooperation
- Aware his/her actions affect the world around him/her
- Behaves respectfully and in an emphatic way
- Has team – work spirit
- Helps other
- Takes responsibility on global issues
- Knows his duties and rights very well
- Acts as an active member of society, for its improvement
- Understands that everything in this world are interconnected
- Behaves ethically

Ethical Obligation: The Role of Education

According to Ban Ki – moon, the Secretary –General of the United Nations, we must foster global citizenship. Education is about more than literacy and numeracy. It is also about the citizenry. Education must fully assume its essential role in helping people to forge more just, peaceful and tolerant societies. This means that education plays a significant role in teaching and making every student a global citizen.

1. Preparedness to face real – world challenges with the right values

- Handling issues such as sexual harassment, religious conflict, bullying, racial discrimination, data privacy.
- Awareness on rights and duties
- Taking positive action within your sphere of influence
- Valuing your own worth

2. Finding the voice to support or to protest on global issues

- Become knowledgeable and able to exercise critical thinking
- Able to communicate and engage constructively even in multi – cultural settings
- Ability to speak and act with tolerance, respect and responsibility amidst diversity.

3. Being part of the solution and making a difference

- Responsibly take action and find win – win solutions to problems
- Create change and make a difference.

ASSESSMENT # 7

Ethical Values Audit

Instructions

1. This is an individual activity.
2. Read and review the lesson on Global Citizenship and Ethics.
3. Evaluate yourself using the Ethical Values Audit below.
4. Rate yourself from 1–5 based on how often you demonstrate each characteristic:
 - 5 – Always
 - 4 – Often
 - 3 – Sometimes
 - 2 – Rarely
 - 1 – Never
5. Give a short example that supports your rating.
6. Identify two ethical values that you need to improve.
7. Write a short reflection explaining your moral responsibility as a global citizen.

Ethical Values Audit

Global Citizenship Value	Rating (1–5)	My Example
Respect for Diversity – I respect people from different cultures, races, religions, and backgrounds.	_____	_____
Empathy – I consider the feelings and experiences of other people.	_____	_____
Responsibility – I take responsibility for the effects of my actions.	_____	_____
Social Justice – I recognize and oppose unfair treatment and discrimination.	_____	_____
Environmental Responsibility – I make choices that help protect the environment.	_____	_____
Digital Responsibility – I use technology and social media responsibly and respectfully.	_____	_____
Cooperation – I work respectfully with people who have different ideas and backgrounds.	_____	_____
Active Citizenship – I am willing to take positive action to help my community.	_____	_____

Analysis

1. What are your two highest-rated values?

Explain how you demonstrate these values in your daily life.

2. What are your two lowest-rated values?

Why do you think you need to improve these values?

3. Choose one global issue discussed in the lesson (e.g., racism, bullying, gender inequality, religious intolerance, political conflict, or global warming). Explain how an individual can act ethically toward this issue.

Reflection

Write 150–200 words answering the question:

“What are my moral responsibilities as a global citizen, and how can my everyday actions contribute to a more just, peaceful, respectful, and sustainable world?”

Rubric – 20 Points

Criteria	Excellent (4)	Good (3)	Fair (2)	Needs Improvement (1)
Ethical Values Audit	All values are rated with specific and relevant examples	Most values have relevant examples	Some examples are incomplete or unclear	Audit is largely incomplete
Understanding of Global Citizenship	Shows a clear understanding of the characteristics and responsibilities of a global citizen	Shows good understanding	Shows limited understanding	Shows little understanding
Moral Implications	Clearly explains how individual actions affect others and the global community	Explains the connection adequately	Provides a limited explanation	Does not clearly explain the connection
Self-Reflection	Reflection is thoughtful, specific, and meaningful	Reflection is clear and relevant	Reflection lacks depth	Reflection is unclear or incomplete
Application to Global Issues	Provides a realistic and ethical response to a global issue	Provides an appropriate response	Response is somewhat relevant	Response is unclear or unrealistic
Total	20 Points

UNIT 8

International and regional organizations and global governance

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

International relations can be defined as political activities and other kinds and aspects of interactions among states, inter-governmental organization, non-government organizations, and Multinational corporations.

Institutions that Govern International Relations

Peace Treaties and Military Alliances

- United Nations (UN): it was founded in 1995, and it has 193 member states with the republic of South Sudan as its newest member. The UN has four functions, which include military, economic, environmental issues, and human protection. However, the ultimate goal of the UN is to maintain peace and order. The UN usually provides a forum wherein countries gather to discuss different issues and concerns. Likewise, the UN promotes and protects human rights through various organizations and mechanisms.
- North Atlantic Treaty Organizations (NATO): is a defensive treaty or a military alliance among the United States, Canada, and other European Countries. This treaty was signed in 1949, and it is based on the idea of collective security. This treaty adheres to collective self-defense. The member countries have agreed to combine their military power against the other nation who would be raising their arms against anyone of its members.

1. Social and Economic Growth

- Red Cross (Red Crescent in Muslim Countries): They are organized in 1863 to help those wounded by wars. They are an independent and neutral organization that would be sent to areas affected by war, conflict, and disasters.
- Doctors without Borders: they are an independent, global movement providing medical aid where it's needed most and was founded in 1971.
- Oxford Committee for famine relief (Oxfam): it is a global movement of people who are fighting inequality to beat poverty. It was formed in 1942 by a group of independent nongovernmental organizations. They are also concerned with social inequalities that make and keep people.
- Save the Children: It is an organization that helps children across the world. It gives children a healthy start of life, the opportunity to learn, and protection from harm. It was founded in 1919 by Eglantyne Jebb and her sister Dorothy Buxton to alleviate hunger and starvation of children in Germany during World War 1.
- Amnesty International: Amnesty International was founded in 1961 by Peter Benenson and it is a global movement that campaigns for the human rights of everyone. The original intention of this movement was to appeal in Britain with aim of acquiring amnesty for prisoners of conscience all over the world who have been arrested for their convictions, ethnic group, or of their religious belief but provided that they haven't used force or resort to violence.

Global Economy

- World Trade Organization (WTO): As discussed in the previous lessons, its primary goal is to foster free trade wherein taxes and tariffs on foreign goods and commodities are eliminated or reduced. They provide a forum for governments to negotiate trade agreements and to settle trade disputes.
- North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA): It is an economic treaty between the US, Canada, and Mexico. It was signed to eliminate barriers to trade, lessen trading cost, increase business investment, and to help North America to be globally competitive.

How Can We Contribute to the International Relations?

- Awareness of Current Events
- Practicing our rights to suffrage
- Supporting Humanitarian Causes
- Being a responsible citizen who knows their duties and responsibilities in society

How can International Relations Contribute to us?

- It helps us by addressing different issues related to making our lives better: o Human Rights o Environment protection o Reduction of poverty o Health care o Peace and Security

REGIONALIZATION IN ASIA

Regionalization helped build bridges among Asian countries. Asian Regionalization is a result of economic activities such as trade, financial transactions, investments, technologies, labor, and tourist flows that connect Asian countries together. It helped sustain the region's growth and contributed to globalization.

ASEAN as a Model of Regionalism

The Association of Southeast Asian Nations, or ASEAN, was established on 8 August 1967 in Bangkok, Thailand, with the signing of the ASEAN Declaration (Bangkok Declaration) by the Founding Fathers of ASEAN, namely Indonesia, Malaysia, Philippines, Singapore, and Thailand. Brunei Darussalam, Vietnam, Lao PDR, Myanmar, and Cambodia making up the ten Member States of ASEAN.

Aims and Purposes (asean.org)

As set out in the ASEAN Declaration, the aims and purposes of ASEAN are:

- To accelerate the economic growth, social progress and cultural development.
- To promote regional peace and stability through abiding respect for justice and the rule of law in whole region and adherence to the principles of the United Nations Charter.
- To promote active collaboration and mutual assistance on matters of common interest in the economic, social, cultural, technical, scientific and administrative fields.
- To provide assistance to each other in the form of training and research facilities in the educational, professional, technical, and administrative spheres.
- To collaborate more effectively for the greater utilization of their agriculture and industries, the expansion of their trade.
- To promote Southeast Asian studies.

ASIAN REGIONALISM

What are the challenges?

Regionalization and Regionalism's main goal is to develop the economy of the nation. Within its goal, there are challenges that the nations must face.

- Exclusion of countries that do not belong in the region.
- A threat to strategic partnerships with countries from other regions.
- Compromised financial stability that may result in a credit crisis and a weak currency.
- Expensive and difficult flow of goods because of the threats on and security of a country.
- Environmental damages may result in radical changes in economic policies.

How can regionalism help Asia grow as a region?

For Asian Development Bank, Asia may be able to address the challenges of regionalism by:

- Linking the competitive strengths of its diverse economies to boost productivity and to sustain the region's growth.
- Connecting the region's capital markets to enhance financial stability, reduce the cost of capital, and improving opportunities for sharing risks.
- Cooperating in setting exchange rates and macroeconomic policies in order to minimize the effects of global and regional shocks and to facilitate the resolution of global imbalances.
- Creating regional mechanisms to manage cross-border health, safety, and other issues.
- Exercising leadership in global decision making to sustain the open global trade and financial systems that have supported a half-century of unparalleled economic development.
- Building connected infrastructure and collaborate on inclusive development to reduce inequalities within and across economies and thus strengthen support for pro-growth policy

Some factors may hinder the integration of the Asian region and these are the following:

- Absence of a non-political platform to maintain peace and stability among countries.
- Lack of liberalization of trade in the region.
- Insufficient support to promote economic growth, social progress, and cultural development in the region.
- Lack of communication and cooperation in Asian countries through media.

ASSESSMENT # 8

Global Institution Critique

Instructions

1. Form a group of 3 members.
2. Choose one international or regional organization discussed in the lesson: United Nations, NATO, Red Cross, Oxfam, Save the Children, Amnesty International, World Trade Organization or ASEAN)
3. Research your chosen organization using at least 3 reliable sources.
4. Prepare a 1–2 page Global Institution Critique containing the following:

A. Organization Profile

- Name of the organization
- Year established
- Main purpose
- Member countries or regions

B. Social Responsibility

Explain the following:

- What global or regional problems does the organization address?
- What programs or actions does it undertake?
- Who benefits from its activities?

C. Critical Analysis

Evaluate the organization by answering:

- How does it contribute to solving global or regional problems?
- What are its major strengths?
- What challenges or limitations does it face?
- How effective is it in fulfilling its social responsibility?

D. Conclusion

Summarize your group's evaluation and explain why international and regional organizations are important to global governance and social responsibility.

Rubric

Total: 50 Points

Criteria	Excellent	Good	Fair	Needs Improvement
1. Organization Profile	Complete, accurate, and well-presented information	Mostly complete and accurate	Some important information is missing	Incomplete or inaccurate information
2. Social Responsibility Analysis	Clearly and deeply explains the organization's role, programs, beneficiaries, and contributions	Clearly explains the organization's social responsibility	Provides basic explanation with limited details	Explanation is unclear or incomplete
3. Critical Analysis	Provides insightful analysis of effectiveness, strengths, challenges, and limitations	Provides good analysis with relevant supporting details	Provides limited analysis	Little or no critical analysis
4. Recommendation	Provides a specific, realistic, and well-supported recommendation	Provides a relevant and practical recommendation	Recommendation is general or lacks support	Recommendation is unclear or missing
5. Presentation & Teamwork	All 3 members participate actively; presentation is clear, organized, and engaging	All members participate; presentation is generally clear	Uneven participation or organization	Limited participation and poorly organized presentation

Conflict resolution strategies

1. Diplomacy and Negotiation:

Diplomacy involves the use of negotiations, dialogue, and communication between conflicting parties to reach mutually acceptable agreements. Diplomatic efforts often involve intermediaries, such as diplomats, mediators, or international organizations, facilitating dialogue and finding common ground.

Origins and Evolution of Diplomacy and Negotiation as Conflict

Resolution: Diplomacy as a conflict resolution method has ancient roots, dating back to early civilizations where emissaries were sent to negotiate treaties and resolve disputes. Over time, diplomacy evolved into a structured practice, with the establishment of diplomatic corps, embassies, and formalized protocols for negotiations between states.

How Diplomacy and Negotiation Work:

Diplomacy and negotiation involve the use of dialogue, communication, and bargaining to achieve mutually acceptable outcomes between conflicting parties. This process typically includes the following steps:

Preparation: Parties conduct research, define their objectives, and assess the interests and positions of the other party.

Dialogue and Negotiation: Diplomats engage in face-to-face discussions, exchange proposals, and seek areas of common interest while addressing differences.

Mediation and Compromise: Neutral mediators may facilitate discussions, offering creative solutions and bridging gaps to facilitate agreement.

Agreement and Implementation: Once an agreement is reached, parties commit to implementing and enforcing the terms, often with the support of international institutions or enforcement mechanisms.

Effectiveness of Diplomacy and Negotiation: The effectiveness of diplomacy and negotiation in resolving conflicts varies depending on factors such as the nature of the conflict, the willingness of parties to engage, and the presence of external pressures or incentives. While diplomacy has successfully averted wars and resolved disputes in many instances, it is not always a panacea and can face challenges such as power imbalances,

Examples of Successful Diplomacy and Negotiation:

1. Camp David Accords (1978): Mediated by U.S. President Jimmy Carter, the Camp David Accords facilitated peace negotiations between Israel and Egypt, leading to a historic peace Treaty and the normalization of relations between the two countries.
2. Iran Nuclear Deal (2015): Negotiated between Iran and the P5+1 countries (United States, United Kingdom, France, Germany, Russia, and China), the Iran Nuclear Deal (Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action) aimed to limit Iran's nuclear program in exchange for Sanctions relief.
3. Paris Climate Agreement (2015): The Paris Agreement, negotiated under the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC), brought together nearly 200 countries to commit to reducing greenhouse gas emissions and combating climate change.

2. Mediation:

Mediation involves the intervention of a neutral third party to assist conflicting parties in reaching a settlement. Mediators help identify underlying issues, facilitate communication, and guide negotiations to find mutually beneficial solutions. Organizations like the United Nations and regional bodies often engage in mediation efforts to resolve conflicts.

Origins and Evolution of Mediation as Conflict Resolution:

Mediation as a conflict resolution method has historical roots in various cultures and societies, where respected individuals or elders facilitated disputes between individuals or groups. The formalization of mediation processes began to emerge as a structured approach to resolving conflicts, with the recognition of neutral third parties' role in facilitating dialogue and negotiation between conflicting parties.

How Mediation Works:

Mediation involves the intervention of a neutral third party to assist conflicting parties in reaching a mutually acceptable agreement. The process typically involves the following steps:

Initiation: Parties agree to engage in mediation voluntarily or through external encouragement from governments, international organizations, or civil society actors.

Introduction and Ground Rules: The mediator establishes ground rules, clarifies the mediation process, and creates a conducive environment for constructive dialogue.

Information Sharing and Framing Issues: Parties articulate their perspectives, interests, and concerns, while the mediator helps reframe issues to identify underlying interests and common ground.

Negotiation and Option Generation: Parties engage in collaborative problem-solving, exploring various options and trade-offs to address their interests and needs.

Agreement and Closure: Once parties reach a consensus, the mediator assists in drafting a formal agreement that outlines the terms and responsibilities of each party.

Effectiveness of Mediation:

Mediation can be an effective conflict resolution method in many cases, offering benefits such as preserving relationships, fostering ownership of the solution, and maintaining confidentiality. However, its effectiveness depends on factors such as the mediator's skills, parties' willingness to engage in good faith, and the complexity of the issues involved. Mediation may face challenges such as power imbalances, lack of trust, and entrenched positions that hinder progress.

Examples of Successful Mediation:

- Dayton Accords (1995): Mediated by U.S. diplomat Richard Holbrooke, the Dayton Accords ended the Bosnian War by bringing together Bosnian, Croatian, and Serbian leaders to negotiate a peace agreement.
- Good Friday Agreement (1998) Mediated by U.S. Senator George Mitchell, the Good Friday Agreement facilitated negotiations between political parties in Northern Ireland, leading to a landmark peace agreement and devolved government.
- Kenya National Dialogue and Reconciliation (2008): Mediated by former UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan, the Kenya National Dialogue and Reconciliation process helped resolve post-election violence by facilitating negotiations between political leaders and civil society groups.

3. Arbitration:

Arbitration involves submitting a dispute to an impartial third party or panel for a binding decision. Arbitrators assess evidence, hear arguments from both sides, and issue a final ruling, which parties agree to abide by beforehand. Arbitration provides a formal and less adversarial alternative to litigation, often used in commercial and investment disputes.

Origins and Evolution of Arbitration as Conflict Resolution:

Arbitration as a method of conflict resolution has roots in ancient legal systems, where neutral individuals or councils were appointed to adjudicate disputes between parties. Over time, arbitration evolved into a formalized process with established rules, procedures, and principles governing the resolution of disputes outside of traditional court systems.

How Arbitration Works:

Arbitration involves submitting a dispute to a neutral third party or panel for a binding decision. The arbitration process typically includes the following steps:

Agreement to Arbitrate: Parties voluntarily agree to submit their dispute to arbitration, often through contractual clauses or separate arbitration agreements.

Appointment of Arbitrators: Parties select arbitrators or agree on a panel of arbitrators with expertise in the subject matter of the dispute

Evidence and Hearings: Parties present evidence, witness testimony, and legal arguments during arbitration hearings, which are conducted in accordance with agreed-upon rules and procedures.

Arbitral Award: The arbitrators review the evidence and arguments presented by both parties and render a final, binding decision known as an arbitral award.

Enforcement of Award: The arbitral award is enforceable under national and international law, and parties commit to abide by the decision.

Effectiveness of Arbitration:

Arbitration offers several advantages as a method of conflict resolution, including flexibility, confidentiality, expertise of arbitrators, and enforceability of awards. It allows parties to tailor procedures to suit their needs, maintain confidentiality, and benefit from arbitrators' specialized knowledge. However, arbitration may face challenges such as costs, limited opportunities for appeal, and potential bias in arbitrator selection.

Examples of Successful Arbitration:

- Commercial Arbitration: International commercial arbitration is widely used to resolve disputes arising from contracts between parties from different jurisdictions. Institutions such as the International Chamber of Commerce (ICC) and the London Court of International Arbitration (LCIA) facilitate commercial arbitration proceedings.
- Investor-State Arbitration: Bilateral investment treaties (BITs) and investment agreements often include provisions for investor-state arbitration, allowing investors to seek redress for alleged breaches of investment protections by host states through arbitration panels such as those established under the International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes (ICSID).
- Sports Arbitration: The Court of Arbitration for Sport (CAS) serves as the primary forum for resolving disputes in the world of sports, including disputes between athletes, clubs, and governing bodies over issues such as doping violations, contractual disputes, and disciplinary matters.

4. Peacekeeping Operations:

Peacekeeping operations deploy international military or civilian personnel to conflict zones. To monitor ceasefires, provide security, facilitate humanitarian assistance, and support political processes. These operations aim to create a conducive environment for conflict resolution and long-term peacebuilding.

Origins and Evolution of Peacekeeping Operations:

Peacekeeping operations emerged in the mid-20th century as a response to international conflicts and the need for collective security arrangements. The United Nations (UN) played a central role in institutionalizing peacekeeping, with the deployment of the first UN peacekeeping mission in 1948 to monitor the Arab-Israeli ceasefire. Since then, peacekeeping operations have evolved in scope, complexity, and mandate, encompassing a range of activities including ceasefire monitoring, conflict prevention, humanitarian assistance, and post-conflict reconstruction.

How Peacekeeping Operations Work:

Peacekeeping operations involve the deployment of military, police, and civilian personnel to conflict-affected regions to help maintain peace, protect civilians, and support political processes. The key components of peacekeeping operations include:

Deployment and Mandate: Peacekeeping missions are authorized by the UN Security Council and operate under specific mandates outlining their objectives, scope of operations, and rules of engagement.

Conflict Monitoring and Prevention: Peacekeepers monitor ceasefires, separate warring parties, and facilitate dialogue to prevent the escalation of violence.

Protection of Civilians: Peacekeepers protect civilians from violence, human rights abuses, and provide humanitarian assistance in collaboration with humanitarian agencies. Support for Political Processes: peacekeepers support political negotiations, elections, and institution-building processes to foster reconciliation, stability, and democratic governance.

Post-Conflict Reconstruction: Peacekeeping missions assist in rebuilding infrastructure, promoting economic development, and strengthening rule of law institutions to support long-term peace and stability.

Effectiveness of Peacekeeping Operations:

The effectiveness of peacekeeping operations varies depending on factors such as political will, mandate clarity, resources, and cooperation from conflicting parties. While peacekeeping missions have helped mitigate violence, protect civilians, and facilitate political transitions in many instances, they face challenges such as insufficient resources, mandate overload, and risks to personnel safety.

Zimbabwe as a Case Study:

Zimbabwe has experienced periods of political instability and conflict, notably during the early 2000s. In 2008, following a disputed presidential election and widespread political violence, Zimbabwe experienced a severe political crisis. The government of Zimbabwe and opposition parties engaged in negotiations mediated by the Southern African Development Community (SADC) to resolve the political impasse. While Zimbabwe has not been the site of a traditional UN peacekeeping operation, regional organizations like the African Union (AU) and SADC have played roles in conflict mediation and peacebuilding efforts within Zimbabwe and the wider Southern African region.

5. Conflict Transformation and Peacebuilding:

Conflict transformation involves addressing root causes of conflicts, such as inequality, political grievances, or identity-based tensions, through structural and societal changes. Peacebuilding efforts focus on fostering reconciliation, promoting dialogue, strengthening institutions, and addressing socio-economic disparities to prevent the recurrence of violence and build sustainable peace.

Origins and Evolution of Conflict Transformation and Peacebuilding:

Conflict transformation and peacebuilding emerged in response to the recognition that addressing the root causes of conflicts and building sustainable peace require comprehensive approaches that go beyond traditional conflict resolution methods. These approaches draw on insights from fields such as conflict resolution, peace studies, development, and human rights to address underlying structural, economic, social, and political factors that contribute to violence and insecurity.

How Conflict Transformation and Peacebuilding Work:

Conflict transformation and peacebuilding involve a range of activities aimed at preventing, managing, and transforming conflicts to build sustainable peace. Key components of these approaches include: analysis of Root Causes: Understanding the underlying drivers of conflict, including structural Inequalities, historical grievances, identity-based tensions, and economic disparities.

- Dialogue and Reconciliation: Facilitating dialogue and reconciliation processes among conflicting parties, communities, and stakeholders to address grievances, foster understanding, and build trust.
- Institutional and Legal Reform: Strengthening governance structures, rule of law institutions, and mechanisms for conflict resolution, accountability, and protection of human rights.
- Socio-Economic Development: Promoting inclusive economic growth, social justice, and equitable access to resources and opportunities to address poverty, marginalization, and inequality.
- Peace Education and Social Cohesion: Investing in education, awareness-raising, and community-based initiatives to promote tolerance, diversity, and non-violent conflict resolution skills.

Effectiveness of Conflict Transformation and Peacebuilding:

Conflict transformation and peacebuilding approaches have shown promise in addressing root causes of conflicts, promoting reconciliation, and building resilient societies. However, their effectiveness depends on factors such as local context, political will, community ownership, and sustained international support. These approaches require long-term commitment, coordination among diverse stakeholders, and adaptation to evolving conflict dynamics.

Case Studies and Examples:

- South Africa: The Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC) in South Africa played a crucial role in addressing the legacies of apartheid, fostering national reconciliation, and promoting social cohesion through truth-telling, reparations, and forgiveness.
- Northern Ireland: The Good Friday Agreement in Northern Ireland, facilitated by international mediation efforts, helped end decades of sectarian violence and establish power-sharing arrangements between nationalist and unionist communities.
- Rwanda: Rwanda's post-genocide reconstruction efforts included grassroots reconciliation initiatives, justice mechanisms such as gacaca courts, and economic development programs aimed at healing wounds, rebuilding trust, and fostering unity among survivors and perpetrators.

ASSESSMENT # 9

Conflict Resolution Simulation

In this activity, you will pretend to be people or countries involved in a conflict. Your goal is not to “win” the argument. Your goal is to find a peaceful solution that both sides can accept.

You will practice how diplomacy and negotiation, mediation, arbitration and peacebuilding can be used to solve conflicts.

Instructions

A. Choose One Conflict

The teacher will assign one scenario.

- Scenario 1: Water Conflict- Country A and Country B share the same river. Country A is using too much water, leaving less water for Country B.
- Scenario 2: Border Conflict- Two neighboring countries disagree about who owns a particular piece of territory.
- Scenario 3: Trade Conflict- Country A increases taxes on products from Country B. Country B wants Country A to remove the additional taxes.
- Scenario 4: Refugee Conflict- Country A receives many refugees from Country B. Country A wants Country B and other countries to help share the responsibility.

B. Understand the Conflict

Answer the following:

- What is the problem?
- Who are involved?
- What does Party A want?
- What does Party B want?

C. Discuss the Problem

The Country A and Country B will explain their concerns and the mediator should listen to both sides and remain neutral.

D. Find Common Ground

The mediator asks questions such as:

- What do both parties need?
- What can each side give up?
- Can we find a compromise?
- What solution would be fair to both sides?

E. Choose a Conflict Resolution Strategy

Each group should identify which strategy you are applying.

F. Create Your Peace Agreement

After the discussion, write three simple solutions.

Rubric

Total: 100 Points

Criteria	Excellent	Good	Fair	Needs Improvement
Organization Profile	Complete, accurate, and well-presented information about the organization, its purpose, history, and members.	Information is mostly complete and accurate.	Some important information is missing or unclear.	Information is incomplete or inaccurate.
Social Responsibility Analysis	Provides a clear and thorough analysis of the organization's role, programs, beneficiaries, and contributions to global or regional issues.	Clearly explains the organization's social responsibility and contributions.	Provides a basic explanation with limited details.	Explanation is unclear or incomplete.
Critical Analysis	Provides insightful analysis of the organization's effectiveness, strengths, challenges, and limitations.	Provides good analysis with relevant supporting details.	Provides limited analysis of the organization.	Provides little or no critical analysis.
Recommendation	Presents a specific, realistic, and well-supported recommendation for improving the organization's effectiveness.	Presents a relevant and practical recommendation.	Recommendation is general or lacks sufficient support.	Recommendation is unclear or missing.
Presentation and Teamwork	All three members participate actively; presentation is clear, organized, confident, and engaging.	All members participate and presentation is generally clear and organized.	Participation is uneven or presentation lacks organization.	Limited participation and poorly organized presentation.

UNIT 10

Peace, Justice, and Social Transformation

Peace, justice, and social transformation in the contemporary world focus on moving beyond the simple absence of war to actively dismantle structural inequalities, combat corruption, and foster sustainable, fair communities.

- Negative Peace vs. Positive Peace- Negative peace means no direct physical or armed violence. Positive peace means the active presence of social justice, equity and healthy relationships between humans and nature.
- Structural Violence- This refers to hidden injustices built into economic, political and legal systems that harm people by preventing them from meeting their basic needs.
- Sustainable Development Goal 16 (SDG 16)- The United Nations Sustainable Development initiative highlights peace, justice and strong institutions as the foundation required to achieve all other global developmental goals.

Dimensions of Peace Education

- Cognitive Phase- Building critical thinking and awareness to understand the root causes of global conflicts, corruption, and systemic discrimination.
- Affective Phase- Cultivating compassion, global concern, self-respect and a deep value for human dignity and nonviolence.
- Active Phase- Encouraging practical action, community-based mediation and advocacy for fair public policies.

Pathways for Social Transformation

- Strengthening the Rule of Law- Ensuring equal access to the legal system and holding public and private institutions accountable.
- Promoting Human Rights: Protecting fundamental freedoms, freedom of expression, and non-discriminatory practices across diverse cultural and social groups.
- Civic Engagement: Empowering youth activists, whistleblowers, and local leaders to drive transparency and peaceful coexistence from the ground up.

Social injustice can be systematically dismantled using established peacebuilding frameworks that address the root causes of conflict and inequality.

Mapping Injustice with Galtung's Triangle

Johan Galtung's peace framework requires identifying three distinct dimensions of violence to build an effective response. Activists must target structural violence by dismantling discriminatory laws and biased institutional policies that restrict resource distribution. Simultaneously, they must challenge cultural violence by confronting social norms and ideologies that justify discrimination in media and daily life. Addressing these two layers ultimately prevents direct violence, which manifests as hate crimes or immediate physical harm.

Shifting from Negative to Positive Peace

An effective strategy must move beyond negative peace, which merely stops immediate protests or overt violence through mediation. True stability requires positive peace, meaning the active construction of long-term equity through fair wage laws, equal healthcare access, and quality education. This shift requires cultivating deep community empathy by integrating systemic peace education into school curricula to change long-term attitudes.

Implementing Restorative Justice Frameworks

Moving away from purely punitive measures allows societies to heal broken community relationships. This framework utilizes victim-offender dialogues to create safe spaces where marginalized groups voice harms directly to institutional leaders. To repair generational economic damage, governments must invest community reparations into historically disenfranchised neighborhoods. Establishing independent truth commissions further supports this by investigating and publicly acknowledging systemic human rights abuses.

Engaging Lederach's Pyramidal Track Strategy

Sustainable structural reform requires engaging all levels of society simultaneously. At the top level, advocates lobby lawmakers and executives to pass anti-discrimination legislation. In the middle tier, peacebuilders train NGO heads, religious leaders, and academics in conflict transformation techniques. Finally, at the grassroots level, local community organizers and minority coalitions mobilize to drive collective action from the ground up.

Practicing Strategic Nonviolent Action

Gene Sharp's framework of nonviolent struggle offers a concrete method to shift power dynamics without physical conflict. It begins with protest and persuasion, using symbolic marches and vigils to raise public awareness. Movement leaders then apply economic pressure through noncooperation, such as boycotts and labor strikes against unjust systems. Ultimately, communities stage nonviolent interventions by establishing alternative markets or community-led safety patrols to replace failing systems.

ASSESSMENT #10

Social Justice Action Plan

Instructions

1. Choose One Issue: Poverty, Discrimination, Bullying, Corruption, Unequal access to education, Environmental problems, Human rights issues or Online misinformation.
2. Action Plan

Question	Your Answer
1. What is the problem?	Describe the social injustice in 2–3 sentences.
2. Who is affected?	Identify the people or group affected.
3. What causes the problem?	Give 1–2 possible causes.
4. What peace framework will you use?	Choose one: Galtung’s Triangle, Positive Peace, Restorative Justice, Lederach’s Strategy, or Nonviolent Action.
5. What can you do?	Give 3 simple actions you can take.
6. What change do you expect?	Describe the positive result you hope to achieve.
7. Personal commitment	Complete: “I can help promote peace and justice by…”

Rubric

Criteria	Excellent	Good	Needs Improvement
Problem	Clearly explains the social injustice.	Explains the problem but lacks some details.	Problem is unclear or missing.
Affected People and Causes	Clearly identifies affected people and causes.	Identifies people and at least one cause.	Information is incomplete.
Peace Framework	Correctly chooses and explains a peace framework.	Chooses an appropriate framework with limited explanation.	Framework is missing or unclear.
Actions	Gives 3 clear, realistic, and peaceful actions.	Gives 2–3 relevant actions.	Gives few or unclear actions.
Expected Change	Clearly explains the positive change expected.	Gives a general expected change.	Expected change is unclear or missing.
Personal Commitment	Gives a clear personal commitment.	Gives a simple commitment.	Commitment is unclear or missing.
Organization	Complete, neat, and easy to understand.	Mostly complete and understandable.	Incomplete or difficult to understand.

UNIT 11

Local Realities and Global Ethics

To understand Local Realities deeply, we must look at how national or global issues manifest uniquely in specific communities. In fields like community development, social work and public policy, this involves shifting away from “one-size-fits-all” ideas and analyzing the actual, lived experiences of a population.

This dimension looks at how power, governance and social structures operate on the ground.

- Power Dynamics- Identifying who holds formal power (elected officials) versus informal power (religious leaders, tribal elders or wealthy families).
- Policy Gaps- National laws often fail because they do not account for local administrative capacities. For example, a national zero-waste law may fail in a rural town that lacks budget for a materials recovery facility.
- Community Organizing- Assessing how active local people’s organizations (POs) and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) are in demanding accountability.

Economic analysis must go beyond broad metrics like gross domestic product (GDP) to view localized survival strategies.

- Livelihood Patterns- Mapping how a specific community earns money, whether through seasonal farming, fishing, or informal micro-enterprises (like sari-sari convenience stores).
- The Informal Economy- Recognizing that a vast portion of local populations survive outside formal banking systems, relying instead on informal lending (e.g., 5-6 loans) or community barter.
- Underemployment- A community might have low unemployment but high underemployment, meaning people work long hours in low-paying, insecure jobs that do not match their skills.

Culture and religion dictate how people interpret interventions, health, and development.

- Indigenous Knowledge- Respecting Indigenous Knowledge Systems and Practices (IKSP), such as traditional land management or community-based dispute resolution.
- Belief Systems- Understanding how faith influences choices. For instance, public health campaigns for family planning or vaccinations must be framed respectfully within local religious or spiritual contexts to be accepted.
- Social Cohesion- Utilizing existing community traditions of mutual aid, such as the Filipino concept of bayanihan (communal unity and cooperation).

Geography and climate directly dictate local vulnerabilities and capabilities.

- Localized Vulnerability- Different areas face vastly different ecological threats. A coastal community prioritizes storm surges and coral reef degradation, while an upland mountain community faces landslides and deforestation.
- Resource Depletion- Tracking how privatization or commercial zoning impacts a community’s access to clean water, fertile land, and green spaces.

Gender roles determine who carries the burden of local crises and who participates in solutions.

- Division of Labor- Analyzing how women often bear the “triple burden” of reproductive work (childcare/housework), productive work (earning an income) and community managing work.
- Access to Resources- Evaluating whether women, youth, and LGBTQ+ individuals have equal rights to land ownership, credit and community leadership positions.

The tension between global ethics and local realities usually plays out through a process called vernacularization which means translating universal ideas into local terms to make them meaningful and accepted. When global rules ignore local context, they fail or cause harm.

Why the Gap Exists

- Moral Imperialism- Imposing Western-centric ideals on traditional societies without considering their existing moral structures.
- Economic Survival- Asking developing regions to prioritize long-term global goals (like green energy) when short-term survival (like affordable coal) is the priority.
- Institutional Weakness- Global frameworks assume strong legal systems, but many local realities feature corruption, informal economies or weak enforcement.

Real-World Examples

1. Public Health (The Ebola Outbreak)

During the West African Ebola outbreak, global mandates required immediate, sterile cremations or prompt burials to stop transmission, colliding with local traditions requiring the washing and touching of the deceased. Forcing families to abandon these sacred rituals caused communities to hide infected bodies, which severely accelerated the virus’s spread. The turning point arrived when international health workers collaborated with local elders to design “safe and dignified burials,” a hybrid approach that satisfied both biological safety standards and deep cultural customs.

2. Environmental Conservation

In environmental conservation, international organizations historically sought to protect biodiversity by declaring forests as strictly enclosed national parks. This strategy criminalized and displaced indigenous communities who had managed and lived sustainably within those ecosystems for centuries. The resulting friction destroyed local livelihoods and stripped ecosystems of their natural guardians. Modern global conservation frameworks have corrected this by shifting to community-based conservation, recognizing that securing indigenous land rights is the most effective way to protect global biodiversity.

3. Corporate Supply Chains

Within international trade, multinational brands frequently issue absolute bans on child labor throughout their global supply chains to satisfy international ethical standards. However, in regions of extreme poverty, an adolescent’s income is often a family’s primary means of survival. Enforcing sudden bans without viable alternatives routinely drives children into far more dangerous, unregulated sectors like illegal mining. To resolve this, progressive corporations now invest in local educational infrastructure and provide parents with financial stipends, neutralizing the economic root causes of child labor rather than just punishing the symptom.

Assessment # 11

Personal Reflection Essay

Instructions

1. Write a short personal reflection essay about how a global issue affects your local community.
2. Choose one global issue discussed in the lesson.
3. Think about how this issue is experienced by people in your school, family or community.
4. Write a reflection explaining how the issue may be different in your local setting.
5. Share your personal thoughts, feelings and insights about the issue.
6. Suggest one simple action or solution that respects both global ethical standards and local culture or needs.
7. End your essay by explaining what you learned from the topic.

Rubric

Criteria	Excellent	Good	Needs Improvement
Understanding	Clearly explains the chosen issue.	Explains the issue adequately.	Explanation is unclear.
Local Connection	Clearly connects the issue to the local community.	Makes a simple local connection.	Local connection is missing.
Global and Local Ethics	Clearly explains how global ideas can respect local needs and culture.	Shows some understanding.	Shows limited understanding.
Personal Reflection	Gives clear and meaningful personal thoughts.	Gives simple personal thoughts.	Gives little or no reflection.
Organization	Essay is complete and easy to understand.	Essay is mostly organized.	Essay is incomplete or difficult to follow.
Grammar and Writing	Writing is clear with few errors.	Has some errors but is understandable.	Has many errors that affect understanding.
TOTAL	50 points

Becoming an Active Global Citizen: Values, Actions, and Impact

Global Citizen

A global citizen is aware of and understands the wider world - and their place in it. They are citizen of the world. They take an active role in their community and work with others to make our planet more peaceful, sustainable and fairer.

Global citizenship involves the following:

- Exploring local and global connections and our views, values and assumption
- Exploring issues of social justice locally and globally
- Exploring the complexity of global issues and engaging with multiple perspectives
- Applying learning to real-world issues and contexts
- Opportunities to make informed, reflective action and be heard

Four Components of Citizenship

1. Membership

Membership constitutes one's status of who and who isn't a member of a state's political community as not all of those living in a state are all considered to be citizens. Citizenship is akin to membership of a club – your application can be denied if you do not possess the appropriate credentials, or your membership terminated if you break the rules. Nations and states often face issues of citizenship in specially when it comes to marginalized groups residing within the state. This includes women, ethnic groups, and refugees among others.

2. Rights

Rights are an essential component of citizenship, although this has not always been the case; Some early uses of the term prioritized participation over rights or duties.

Classification of Rights

- Civil Rights-liberty of the person, freedom of speech, thought and faith, the right to own property and to conclude valid contracts, and the right to justice, which are provided for, Marshall argued, by the legal system.
- Political Rights-power as a member of a governing body or an elector of such a body. Allowed for by the nature of the democratic system.
- Social Rights-as befits a member of civil society, and allowed for by the Welfare State

3. Duties

The least discussed of the three as it is complimentary with rights. Though it is important to note the duties can exist with our rights. Examples of duties includes national service. The discourse of citizenship appears automatically to view rights and duties as reciprocal. But even arguments for universal rights often carry with them an unwritten flip side: the duty to obey the rights of others, without which the rights themselves, some argue, lose salience.

4. Participation

In the Ancient Greek use of the term, as employed for example by Aristotle, citizenship was always primarily about participation, that is, about empowerment to become active in the governing of a society.

Importance of Global Citizenship

1. You become more aware- A global citizen is aware that we live in an interconnected web where many of our actions and choices affect those locally, nationally and many times even internationally. They are able to respect themselves as well as others, regardless of where they live. A result of thinking globally means you'll see more people advocate for serious issues. Some of these matters could include human rights, religious pluralism, gender equity, the rule of law, environmental protection, sustainable economic growth, and poverty alleviation.

2. You participate in the community

Generally, a global citizen tries to have an understanding of how the world works and tries to stay well-informed. They participate in the community at a range of levels from the place. That's where the youth comes in.

3. You become a problem-solver

With a global citizenship education, young people are able to solve problems, make decisions, think critically, communicate ideas effectively and work well with others. This not only helps them personally and educationally but eventually professionally as well. Thus, a global education in the classroom is paramount. You have several opportunities to be flexible, creative and proactive.

Benefits Of Global Citizenship

Global citizenship helps young people to:

- Build their own understanding of world events.
- Think about their values and what's important to them.
- Take learning into the real world.
- Challenge ignorance and intolerance.
- Get involved in their local, national, and global communities.
- Develop an argument and voice their opinions.
- See that they have power to act and influence the world around them.

Global Citizenship Responsibilities

A global citizen, living in an emerging world community, has moral, ethical, political, and economic responsibilities. These responsibilities include:

- Responsibility to understand one's own perspective and the perspectives of others on global issues.
- Responsibility to respect the principle of cultural diversity.
- Responsibility to make connections and build relationships with people from other countries and cultures.
- Responsibility to understand the ways in which the peoples and countries of the world are inter-connected and inter-dependent
- Responsibility to understand global issues
- Responsibility to advocate for greater international cooperation with other nations
- Responsibility for advocating for the implementation of international agreements, conventions, treaties related to global issues.
- Responsibility for advocating for more effective global equity and justice in each of the value domains of the world community.

Assessment # 12

Global Citizenship Manifesto

Instructions

1. This is an individual assessment.
2. Create your own Global Citizenship Manifesto that reflects your personal commitment to becoming an active and responsible global citizen.
3. Your manifesto should be 1 page and must include the following:
 - In a short paragraph, explain: What does being a global citizen mean to me? Connect your answer to the ideas of membership, rights, duties, and participation.
 - Choose three values that you believe are important for an active global citizen. For each value, briefly explain why it is important to you.
 - Identify three responsibilities that you are willing to practice as a global citizen.
 - Identify three specific actions that you can realistically do in your daily life.
 - End your manifesto with a short personal pledge beginning with:
“As an active global citizen, I commit myself to...”
Your pledge should state how you will use your values, rights, duties, and participation to contribute to a more peaceful, fair, inclusive, and sustainable world.
